

Sinclair
Broadcasting is clearly trying to
influence the election by requiring its
stations to show an
anti-Kerry
documentary before
the election. We don't need big
companies using
public airways to
manipulate political
outcomes for their
own interests.
Rather, Sinclair
owes it to the public to serve the
public's interest.

That is only
accomplished by presenting programming that
favors neither one
side nor the other.
This is a graphic
example of why media
regulation has to be strengthened. Such companies will not
on their own conduct
themselves in a
responsible way.